

Reduce employment intake review from 45 minutes to under 5.

Without replacing your staff, your process, or your judgment.

WHAT YOUR INTAKE COORDINATOR IS DOING RIGHT NOW

- Sorting documents Pay stubs, HR emails, warning letters, texts — arriving in every format, from every direction.
- Building a timeline manually Writing out what happened, when, based on reading 12 files in no particular order.
- Deciding what matters Spending 30–45 minutes per intake before an attorney can even start evaluating the case.
- Missing cases High volume + limited review time = good cases declined because there was no capacity to look.

WHAT ARRIVES IN YOUR FIRM'S REVIEW QUEUE INSTEAD

The worker submits their records and describes their situation. one3Seven reads everything and prepares a single organized review packet before your attorney opens a single file.

- Chronological timeline Dates and events in order — with each event linked to its source record
- Records already categorized HR communications, payroll, discipline, scheduling, separation — sorted on arrival
- Key facts extracted Termination reason, complaint date, warning reason — from the documents themselves
- Priority review list "Start here" — the 3–4 records that matter most, ranked before you open anything
- Gaps flagged What exists, what is missing, what needs confirmation — before the first call

Every fact points back to a record.

one3Seven does not give opinions. It shows what the documents say and where they say it. Your attorney reviews the records. Your attorney decides what matters.

THE STAFFING MATH

What Changes	Time Saved	What That Means
Intake coordinator time saved	30–40 min per intake	Sorting, organizing, timeline building — eliminated
Attorney pre-review time saved	20–30 min per intake	Attorney opens an organized packet, not a pile of files
At 20 intakes per month	8–11 hours recovered	Per month, per firm — without adding headcount
one3Seven Practice plan	$499/month	Less than one hour of attorney time at $350/hr

THE CONSENT MODEL — WHAT FIRMS AND WORKERS BOTH NEED TO HEAR

Workers control access. A firm sees the intake organization — timeline, categories, record counts — before approving access. The worker approves. Then the firm sees the full packet. Every access event is logged and timestamped.

- Practice Manager / Ops — Wants a repeatable intake process that does not depend on one coordinator's system.

Intake Director — Wants organized records waiting when they open a new intake — not a sorting project.
