

one3Seven

Public Overview & Partner Brief

Prepared: June 10, 2026

For: Jimmy · Wes · Future Partners · Trusted Advisors

A clear, factual overview for trusted legal-tech contacts, potential partners, advisors, and future collaborators.

Intentionally plain and direct — no overselling, no legal claims.

What this document covers:

What it is

Who it helps

Current stage

How to help

This document is for early trusted conversations only. Share thoughtfully.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

What one3Seven Does

one3Seven is a legal intake and case-readiness platform built to help workers organize employment-related stories, documents, timelines, and records before a law firm reviews the matter.

The platform does not replace an attorney, does not give legal advice, and does not decide whether a claim exists. Its purpose is to make the earliest stage of legal intake cleaner, faster, and easier for both the worker and the firm.

The company question now is no longer only: Can we build it?
The more important question is: Will firms actually adopt it?

The product is currently in beta. The core workflow exists — worker intake, document upload, firm-side review, timeline organization, and additional document requests. The next stage is focused on firm trust, firm adoption, review speed, and conversion.

THE SIMPLE EXPLANATION

One sentence.

one3Seven turns scattered worker records into a structured intake packet a law firm can review.

A worker may start with paystubs, texts, emails, HR complaints, write-ups, schedules, termination records, screenshots, and a confusing story. one3Seven helps organize that into a cleaner review experience for a firm.

one3Seven is not trying to be the lawyer. It is trying to make the first review more organized.

WHY IT EXISTS

Employment intake is often messy at the exact moment clarity matters most. Before a firm can evaluate a matter, someone needs to answer:

- Who is the worker?
- When did employment begin and end?
- What documents exist?
- What is still missing or unclear?
- Who was the employer?
- What happened, and in what order?
- Which events are supported by records?

one3Seven is being built around this intake gap.

WHO IT HELPS

Workers	People who need a guided way to tell their story, upload employment-related records, and organize what happened before a firm reviews it.
Law Firms	Plaintiff-side employment firms that need cleaner review packets and faster early triage.
Intake Teams	Intake managers, case managers, and legal administrators who spend time chasing missing documents, sorting records, and preparing matters for attorney review.
Referral & Legal-Service Partners	Trusted operators who need a better way to organize, route, or evaluate early worker inquiries.

HOW IT WORKS

The worker enters their story and uploads supporting records. one3Seven organizes the information into a structured review experience. The firm can review the intake packet, timeline, uploaded documents, current understanding, and missing information.

The platform shows what is known, what is supported by records, and what still needs clarification. The goal is not to decide the matter — it is to create a better starting point for human review.

WORKER SIDE

- Tell their story in a guided way.
- Upload documents and records.
- Add employer, date, and event context.
- Respond to document requests.
- See that information is organized.
- Understand what is shared with firms.

FIRM SIDE

- Review worker and employer information.
- See employment dates and record counts.
- Review uploaded files by category.
- Read an organized timeline of events.
- Review clarification needs.
- Accept, decline, or request more documents.

WHAT MAKES ONE3SEVEN DIFFERENT

one3Seven is not just a contact form. It is not just file storage. It is not trying to be a legal conclusion machine.

The difference is the organization layer: one3Seven converts messy worker input into a structured intake packet that supports faster, clearer firm review.

The product value is simple: reduce intake chaos before a firm spends serious time reviewing the matter.

CURRENT STAGE

one3Seven is currently in beta with a live demo environment and a working firm-side review experience. The current priority is not broad marketing — it is careful validation with trusted people who understand law firms, legal marketing, intake operations, and employment law workflows.

The key question for this stage:

Why should this firm care?

Every screen, demo, and early conversation should answer that question.

WHAT IS ALREADY BUILT

- | | |
|------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| ■ Worker intake flow | ■ Current understanding section |
| ■ Worker story collection | ■ Uploaded records review |
| ■ Document upload flow | ■ Document request flow |
| ■ Firm review queue | ■ Worker document response |
| ■ Firm intake review screen | ■ Worker !” firm notifications |
| ■ Structured intake snapshot | ■ Demo mode |
| ■ Timeline organization | ■ Live beta URL |

WHAT IS STILL BEING IMPROVED

one3Seven is early and should be presented honestly as an early beta. The most important improvements are not random features — they are improvements that increase firm trust, firm adoption, firm review speed, and firm conversion.

- The intelligence layer
- Document extraction reliability
- Worker guidance
- Demo readiness
- Reducing placeholder language
- Timeline accuracy and clarity
- Firm review clarity
- Attorney-safe language
- Security verification
- Ensuring the app never sounds like it gives legal conclusions

60-DAY PRODUCT DISCIPLINE

For the next 60 days, no feature should be built unless it improves:

Firm trust

Firm adoption

Review speed

Firm conversion

Everything else goes into the future roadmap. This keeps the company focused on the real adoption question instead of drifting into features that do not help firms say yes.

THE ADOPTION QUESTIONS

The best early conversations should be built around truth — not compliments. Ask these:

If this fails, why does it fail?

Who inside a firm feels the intake pain most?

What would need to be true for you to introduce this to a firm contact?

What would make a firm trust this?

What would make a firm ignore this?

Who is the buyer, who is the user, and who blocks adoption?

WHY THIS MATTERS

The earliest stage of a legal matter is where many people get lost. Workers may not know how to present what happened. Firms may not have time to untangle every messy intake. Useful facts can be buried in screenshots, payroll records, emails, or memory.

A stronger intake packet can help firms review faster, help workers feel more clearly understood, and reduce wasted time on both sides.

The goal is a cleaner handoff between a worker's story and a firm's review process.

WHERE ONE3SEVEN IS GOING

NEAR TERM

Make employment-law intake dramatically cleaner for workers and law firms. Pilot firms. Proof of adoption.

LONG TERM

Broader legal-readiness infrastructure — medical records, exhibit organization, transcript support, trial-prep. Future possibilities, not current priority.

HOW SOMEONE CAN HELP

The most useful help right now is specific feedback from people who understand legal intake, law firm operations, legal marketing, employment law, referral networks, or legal tech sales.

- Review the demo and give honest feedback.
- Explain how firms currently handle intake.
- Identify what attorneys would distrust.
- Suggest which role inside a firm would care most.
- Pressure-test whether firms would pay, pilot, or ignore it.
- Make one thoughtful introduction to the right legal or intake contact.
- Help shape language that sounds credible to law firms.

TRUST AND BOUNDARY NOTE

one3Seven is not a law firm, does not provide legal advice, and does not replace attorney review. The platform is built to support organization, intake readiness, and firm-side review. This overview should be shared thoughtfully with trusted contacts only.

one3Seven has moved from a build question to an adoption question.

The next breakthrough is likely to come from honest conversations with people who know how real firms think, buy, hesitate, and adopt.